vessels of neutral nations, is, to board, & take from them, persons in the land and sea service of an enemy, contraband of war, an enemy's property. All nations agree respecting the two first articles, but there has been and still exists a diversity of opinion as to the last. On that and other questions of considerable importance, disputes have arisen which are yet unsettled. The Empress Catharine of Russia, a distinguished advocate of just principles, placed herself in 1780 at the head of neutral nations, in favor of a liberal construction of their rights, and her successors have generally followed her example. In all the discussions on these topics, we find nothing of the British claim to impressment; no acknowledgment of it in any treaty, or proof of submission to it by any power. If instances have occurred in which British cruisers have taken British seamen from the vessels of other nations, they were as it is presumed, in cases either not acquiesced in or of an extraordinary nature only, affording no countenance to their practice and pretension in relation to the United States. Cases of this kind, if such there be, afford no proof of a systematic claim in the British government to impressment, or of submission to it by other powers. This claim has been set up against the United States only, who have in consequence thereof been compelled to discuss its merits.

This claim is in fact traced to another source, the allegiance due by British subjects to their sovereign, and his right by virtue thereof, to their services. This has been distinctly stated in a late declaration by the Prince Regent. Knowing the nature of the claim, we know also the extent of the right & obligations incident to it. Allegiance is a political relation between a sovereign and his people. It is the obligation which binds the latter in return for the protection the former receive. These reciprocal duties have the same limit. They are confined to the dominions of the sovereign, beyond which he has no rights, can afford no protection, and can of course claim no allegiance. A citizen or subject of one power, entering the dominions of another, owes allegiance to the latter, in return for the protection he receives. Whether a sovereign has a right to claim the service of such of his subjects as have left his own dominions is a question, respecting which also a difference of opinion may exist. It is certain that no sovereign has a right to pursue his subjects into the territories of another, be the motive for it what it may. Such an entry, without the consent of the other power, would be a violation of its territory, and an act of hostility. Officers, even conspirators, cannot be pursued by one power into the territory of another, nor are they delivered up by the latter, except in compliance with treaties, or by favor. That the vessels of a nation are considered a part of its territory, with the exception of the belligerent right only, is a principle too well established to be brought into discussion.—Each state has exclusive jurisdiction over its own vessels. Its laws govern in them, and offenses against those laws are punishable by its tribunals only. The flag of a nation protects every thing sailing under it, in time of peace, and in time of war likewise, with the exception of the belligerent rights growing out of the war. An entry on board the vessels of one power by the cruisers of another, in any other case, and the exercise of any other authority over them, is a violation of right, and an act of hostility.

The British government, aware of the truth of this doctrine, has endeavored to avoid its consequences in the late declaration of the Prince Regent. It has not contended that British cruisers have a right to pursue and search our vessels for British seamen. It asserts only that they have a right to search them for other objects, and being on board for a lawful cause, and finding British seamen there, that they have a right to impress and bring them away, under the claim of allegiance. When we see a systematic pursuit of our vessels by British cruisers, and the impressment of seamen from them, not at a port of the enemy, where a regular blockade had been instituted, and by the blockading squadron; but in every part of the ocean, on our coast, and even in our harbors, it is difficult to believe that impressment is not the real motive, and the other the pretext for it. But to place this argument of the British government on the strongest ground, let it be admitted that the entry was lawful, is it so to commit an act not warranted by the purpose for which the entry was made? There is levity in this argument, which neither suits the parties nor the subject. The British government founds its right of impressment from our ships on that of allegiance, which is a permanent right, equally applicable to peace and war. The right of impressment, therefore, from the vessels of other powers must likewise be permanent, and equally applicable to peace and war. It would not, however, take this broad ground; lest the injustice and extravagance of the penetration might excite the astonishment and indignation of other powers, to whom it would be equally applicable. To claim it as a belligerent right would have been equally unjust and absurd, as no trace of it could be found in the Belligerent Code. The British government was, therefore reduced to a very embarrassing dilemma. To acknowledge that it could not support the claim, on either principle, would be to relinquish it, and yet it could rely on neither. It endeavored to draw some aid from both. A state of war exists which brings the parties together, Great Britain, as a belligerent, and the U. States as a neutral power. British officers have now a right to board and search American vessels, but for what? Persons in the service of an enemy, contraband of war, or enemy's property? This would not accomplish the end. It is, however, the utmost limit of the belligerent right. Allegiance, which is an attribute of sovereignty, comes to her aid, and communicates all the necessary power. The national character of the neutral vessel ceases. The complete right of sovereignty and jurisdiction over it is transferred to Great Britain. It is on this foundation that the British government has raised this monstrous superstructure. It is with this kind of argument that it attempts to justify its practice of impressment from our vessels.

TREASURY REPORT.

Extract of a letter from the Chairman of the Committee of Ways & Means to the Secretary of the Treasury, dated Washington, October 14, 1814.

SIR—The Committee of Ways and Means have had under their consideration the support of public credit by a system of taxation more extended than the one heretofore adopted.—They have determined to suspend proceeding on their report at present before the House of Representatives, with a view to afford you an opportunity of suggesting any other, or such additional provisions as may be necessary to revive and maintain unimpaired the public credit. I have the honor to be, &c &c JOHN W. EPPES.

Hon. Mr. DALLAS,
Secretary of the Treasury.

THE ANSWER.

Treasury Department,

October 17, 1814.

SIR—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 14th inst. and, aware of the necessity for an early proposition of Congress on the subject to which it relates, I proceed, at the moment of entering upon the duties of office, to offer to the consideration of the committee of Ways and Means, an answer on the several points of their enquiry.

Contemplating the present state of the finances, it is obvious, that a deficiency in the revenue, and a depreciation in the public credit, exist from causes which cannot in any degree be ascribed, either to the want of resources, or to the want of integrity in the nation. Different minds will conceive different opinions in relation to some of those causes; but it will be agreed on all sides, that the most operative have been the inadequacy of our system of taxation to form a foundation for public credit; and the absence even from that system of the means which are best adapted to anticipate, collect and distribute the public revenue.

The wealth of the nation, in the value and products of its soil, in all the acquisitions of personal property, and in all the varieties of industry, remains almost untouched by the hand of government; for, the national faith, and not the national wealth, has hitherto been the principal instrument of finance. It was reasonable, however, to expect, that a period must occur in the course of a protracted war, when confidence in the accumulating public engagements could only be secured by an active demonstration, both of the capacity and the disposition to perform them. In the present state of the treasury, therefore, it is a just consolation to reflect, that a prompt and resolute application of the resources of the country will effectually relieve from every pecuniary embarrassment and vindicate the fiscal honor of the government.

But it would be vain to attempt to disguise, and it would be pernicious to palliate the difficulties which are now to be overcome. The exigencies of the government require a supply of treasure for the prosecution of the war, beyond any amount which it would be politic, even if it were practicable, to raise by an immediate and constant imposition of taxes.—There must, therefore, be a resort to credit, for a considerable portion of the supply. But the public credit is at this juncture so depressed, that no hope of adequate succour, on moderate terms, can safely rest upon it. Hence, it becomes the object first and last in every practical scheme of finance, to reanimate the confidence of the citizens; and to impress on the mind of every man, who, for the public account, renders services, furnishes supplies, or advances money, a conviction of the punctuality as well as of the security of the government. It is not to be regarded, indeed, as the case of preserving a credit, which has never been impaired, but rather as the case of rescuing from reproach a credit over which doubt and apprehension (not the less injurious perhaps, because they are visionary) have cast an auspicious shade. In the former case, the ordinary means of raising and appropriating the revenue, will always be sufficient; but in the latter case, no exertion can be competent to attain the object, which does not quiet, in every mind every fear of future loss or disappointment in consequence of trusting to the pledges of the public faith.

The condition of the circulating medium of the country presents another copious source of mischief and embarrassment. The recent expectations of specie have considerably diminished the fund of gold and silver coin; and another considerable portion of that fund has been drawn by the timid and the wary, from the use of the community into the private coffers of individuals. On the other hand, the multiplication of banks in the several states has so increased the quantity of paper currency, that it would be difficult to calculate its amount; and still more difficult to ascertain its value, with reference to the capital on which it has been issued. But the benefit of even this paper currency is in a great measure lost, as the suspension of payments in specie at most of the banks has suddenly broken the chain of accommodation, that previously extended the credit and the circulation of the notes which were omitted in one state into every state in the union. It may in general be affirmed, therefore, that there exists at this time no adequate circulating medium common to the citizens of the U. States. The monied transactions of private life are at a stand; and the fiscal operations of government labor with extreme inconvenience. It is impossible that such a state of things should be long endured; but, let it be fairly added, that with legislative aid it is not necessary that the endurance should be long. Under favorable circumstances, and to a limited extent, an emission of Treasury Notes would probably afford relief; Treasury Notes are an expensive & precarious substitute, either for coin or for bank notes, charged as they are with a growing interest, productive of no countervailing profit, or emolument, and exposed to every breath of popular prejudice or alarm. The establishment of a national institution, operating upon credit combined with capital, and regulated by prudence and good faith, is, after all, the only efficient remedy for the disordered condition of our circulating medium. While accomplishing that object, too, there will be found, under the auspices of such an institution, a safe depository for the public treasure, and a constant auxiliary to the public credit. But whether the issues of a paper currency proceed from the national treasury, or from a national bank, the acceptance of the paper in a course of payments and receipts must be forever optional with the citizens. The extremity of that day cannot be anticipated, when any honest and enlightened statesman will again venture upon the desperate expedient of a tender law.

From the painful, but necessary development of existing evils, we pass, with hope and confidence, to a more specific consideration of the measures from which relief may be certainly and speedily derived. Remembering always, that the objects of the government are to place the public credit upon a solid and durable foundation; to provide a revenue commensurate with the demands of a war expenditure, and to remove from the treasury an immediate pressure, the following propositions are submitted to the committee, with every sentiment of deference and respect.

PROPOSITIONS.

- It is proposed, that, during the war, and until the claims contemplated by the proposition are completely satisfied or extinct, there shall be annually raised by taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, a fund for these purposes:
- For the support of government $1,500,000
- For the principal and interest of the public debt, existing before the declaration of war, and payable according to the contract, $500,000
- For the interest of the public debt contracted, and to be contracted, by loans, or otherwise, $500,000

From the commencement to the termination of the war, calculated upon an annual principal of 72 millions of dollars

- For the payment of treasury notes, with the accruing interest, 4,320,000
- 7,400,000
- For the payment of debentures to be issued (as is hereinafter proposed) for liquidated balances, due to individuals, on account of services or supplies, authorized by law, but either not embraced by a specific appropriation or exceeding the sum appropriated, 280,000
- For the current addition to the sums raised by loan, or issues of treasury notes, towards defraying the general expenses of the war, 2,000,000
- For the gradual establishment of a sinking fund, to extinguish the debt incurred during the war, 500,000
- For a contingent fund, to meet sudden and occasional demands upon the treasury, 1,500,000 to preside, as the managers of each office of discount and deposit, and one person to be the cashier.

- The general powers, privileges, and regulations of the bank, shall be the same as are usual in similar institutions; but with this special provision that the general accounts shall be subject to the inspection of the Secretary of the Treasury.

IV. It is proposed, that, after having thus provided for the punctual payment of the interest, upon every denomination of public debt; for raising annually a portion of the annual expense, by taxes; for establishing a sinking fund, in relation to the old debt; and for securing to the public the efficient agency of a national bank; the only remaining object of supply shall be accomplished by annual loans, and issues of treasury notes, if, unexpectedly, such issues should continue to be necessary or expedient.

- The amount of annual expenditure during the war, exceeding the sums provided for, does not admit of a prospective estimate beyond the year 1815; but for that year it may be estimated with sufficient accuracy for the general purposes of the present communication, at $8,000,000

- Then for the year 1815, an additional provision must be made, authorizing a loan and the issue of treasury notes, to an equal amount $8,000,000

V. It is proposed that the accounts for authorized expenses being duly stated and settled, a certificate or debenture shall issue to the accountant specifying the balance; and that in all cases, where there has been no specific appropriation, or the claim exceeds the amount of the sum appropriated, the balance shall bear an interest of 3 per cent until provision is made by law for paying the amount.

VI. And finally, it is proposed to relieve the treasury from an immediate pressure, upon the principles of the following statement:

- The amount of demands upon the treasury (excluding balances of appropriations for former years unsatisfied) was stated in the report of the late Secretary of the Treasury, of the 23d of September, 1814, to be on the 30th of June, 27,576,391 19
- The account of the third quarter of 1814, are not yet made up, and the precise sum paid during that quarter cannot now be ascertained; but they amount to nearly 8,400,000

Leaving to be paid in the 4th quarter of 1814, $19,176,391 19

- This balance payable during the 4th quarter of 1814, consists of the following items: Civil, diplomatic & miscellaneous expenses about 332,292 99

Military, about 8,792 688
Naval, about 2,582,010 97
Public debt, about 7,648 19 23

2. The account of the 3rd quarter of 1814, are not yet made up, and the precise sum paid during that quarter cannot now be ascertained; but they amount to nearly 8,400,000

Leaving to be paid in the 4th quarter of 1814, $19,176,391 19

4. The existing provisions by law for the payment of this balance of $19,176,391 19 may be stated as follows:

The act of the 24th of March, 1814, authorized a loan for

The act of the 4th of March, 1814, authorized an issue of treasury notes for 5,000,000

Under these authorities there have been borrowed on loan, about 10,895,000

There has been sent to Europe in six per cent. stock 6,000,000

These has been issued in treasury notes 3,504,000

20,399,000

$9,601,000

There remains therefore an unexecuted authority to borrow 8,105,000

To issue treasury notes 1,496,000

$9,601,000

The demands of the fourth quarter being then

There may be applied to meet them, the revenue accruing during the quarter from all sources, about 2,900,000

Also payments to be made on account of loans already contracted for according to the authority above stated about 2,500,000

5,400,000

Leaving a balance to be provided for $13,776,391 19

By the authority remaining to issue treasury notes 1,496,000

By an additional authority to be granted by law to borrow, and to issue treasury notes

4,175,391 19

$23,776,391 19

These estimates, however, it will be observed, are made with a view, simply, to the approbation by law for the expenses of the year 1814; and do not embrace a provision to satisfy balances of appropriations made for the expenses of preceding years which have not been paid off at the Treasury. But it will, probably, be deemed expedient to make provision by extending the new authority to borrow from the above balance, to 6,000,000. If the 6 per cent, stock which has been sent to Europe should be there disposed of, it will form an item in the estimates of the ensuing year.

As a portion of the amount to be provided during the present quarter, consists of Treasury Notes which will soon be due, it will be advisable to make them receivable in subscriptions to the loan.

It is proper to accompany these propositions with a few explanatory remarks.

1. The first proposition contemplates a permanent system; but the estimate of the particular items of claims and demands upon the public, must be regarded as immediately applying to the year 1815. In every subsequent year there will necessarily be some variation; as, for instance, the item of interest on the old debt will annually sink, while the item of interest on the new debt will annually rise during the continuance of the war.

The items for annually raising a portion of the public expenses by taxes, and for applying to the new debt a sinking fund (gradually increasing, until it becomes commensurate to its object) are essential features in the plan suggested, with a view to the revival and maintenance of public credit. The extinguishment of the old debt is already in rapid operation by the wise precaution of a similar institution.

2. The second proposition will, doubtless, generate many and very various objections. The endeavor has been, however, to spread the general amount of the taxes over a wide surface with a hand as light and equal as is consistent with convenience in the process, and certainly in the result.

All the opportunities of observation, and all the means of information that have been possessed, leave no doubt upon the disposition of the people to contribute generously for relieving the necessities of their country; and it has been thought unworthy of that patriotic disposition to dwell upon scanty means of supply, or short lived expedients. Whenever the war shall be happily terminated in an honorable peace, and the Treasury shall be again replenished by the tributary streams of commerce, it will be at once a duty and a pleasure to recommend an alleviation, if not an entire exonerations of the burthens which necessarily fall at present upon the agriculture and manufactures of the nation.

3. In making a proposition for the establishment of a national bank, I cannot be insensible to the high authority of the names which have appeared in opposition to that measure upon constitutional grounds. It would be presumptuous to conjecture that the sentiments which actuated the opposition have passed away, and yet it would be denying to experience a great practical advantage were we to suppose that a difference of times and circumstances would not produce a corresponding difference in the opinions of the wisest, as well as of the purest men. But in the present case, a change of private opinion is not material to the success of the proposition for establishing a national bank. In the administration of human affairs, there must be a period when discussion shall cease and decision shall become absolute. A diversity of opinion may honorably survive the contest; but, upon the genuine principles of a representative government, the opinion of the majority can alone be carried into action. The judge, who dissents from the majority of the bench, changes not his opinion, but performs his duty when he enforces the judgment of the court, although it is contrary to his own convictions.—An oath to support the constitution and the laws, is not, therefore, an oath to support them according to the interpretation of the legitimate authorities. For the erroneous decisions of a court of law, there is the redress of a censure, as well as of an appellate jurisdiction. Over an act founded upon an exposition of the constitution, made by the legislative department of the government, but alleged to be incorrect, we have seen the judicial department exercise a remedial power. And even if all the departments, legislative, executive and judicial, should concur in the exercise of a power which is either thought to transcend the constitutional trust, or to operate injuriously upon the community, the case is still within the reach of a competent control, through the medium of an amendment to the constitution, upon the proposition, not only of Congress, but of the several states. When, therefore, we have seen the existence of a national bank for a period of twenty years, with all the sanctions of the legislative, executive, and judicial authorities; when we have seen the dissolution of one institution, and heard a loud and continual call for the establishment of another; when under these circumstances, neither Congress nor the several states have resorted to the power of amendment; can it be deemed a violation of the right of private opinion, to consider the constitutionality of a national bank, as a question for ever settled and at rest?

But, after all, I should not merit the confidence, which it will be my ambition to acquire, if I were to suppress the declaration of an opinion, that in these times, the establishment of a national bank will not only be useful in promoting the general welfare, but that it is necessary and proper for carrying into execution some of the most important powers constitutionally vested in the government.

Upon the principles and regulations of the national bank, it may be sufficient to remark, that they will be best unfolded in the form of a bill, which shall be immediately prepared. A compound capital is suggested, with a design equally to accommodate the subscribers, and to aid the general measures, for the revival of public credit; but the proportions of specie and stock may be varied, if the scarcity of coin should render it expedient; yet not in so great a degree, as to prevent an early commencement of the money operations of the institution.

4. The estimates of receipts, from established sources of revenue, and from the proposed new duties; and the estimates of expenditures, on all the objects contemplated in the present communication; have been made upon a call so sudden, and upon materials so scattered, that it is not expected to claim a perfect reliance on their accuracy. They are, however, believed to be sufficiently accurate to illustrate and support the general plan, for the revival of the public credit, the establishment of a permanent system of revenue, and the removal of the immediate pressure on the Treasury.

Upon the whole, sir, I have freely and openly assumed the responsibility of the station in which I have the honour to be placed. But conscious of the imperfections of the judgment that dictates the answer to the important inquiries of the Committee of Ways and Means, I derive the highest satisfaction from reflecting, that the honor and safety of the nation, for war, or for peace, depend on the wisdom, patriotism, and fortitude of Congress, during times which imperiously demand a display of those qualities in the exercise of the legislative authority.

I have the honor to be,
Very respectfully, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

A. J. DALLAS.

J. W. EPPES, Chairman of the Committee of Ways & Means

KENTUCKY GAZETTE.

LEXINGTON, NOVEMBER 7.

The objects of Governor Strong in convening the Legislature of Massachusetts, are gradually unfolding themselves. A motion has been made, and a day set apart for its discussion, to send a deputation to Washington, to request Mr. Madison to resign. Another has been proposed, to prevent the collection of duties and taxes under the authority of the U. S. States, and for securing and placing in the Treasury of Massachusetts, all monies now remaining in the hands of U. S. officers.—And a Committee appointed to consider the Governor's message, have reported resolutions for raising an army of ten thousand men, and the appointment of delegates to attend a convention of the New England states, and such others as may think proper to be represented there.—The report hints at adopting a new Constitution, or making some "radical" changes in the present one. Whether the objects of these factious is to intimidate the Congress into submission to the late pretensions of the enemy, or to set on foot some other project of treason, we will not at this time offer a prediction. Let the event speak for itself.

There is a bill now pending before the New York Legislature, for raising two regiments of Blacks, to be officered by Whites.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

Washington City, October 20.

"The new Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Dallas, has made a report, in which he speaks of the distressed state of the country as to its financial operations, and recommends the establishment of a National Bank, with a capital of fifty millions of dollars, to be located in Philadelphia, and to continue for twenty years—it will take in some shape this session Col. Johnson still perseveres in his enquiry into the cause of the capture of the City, with his usual diligence, love of truth and of his country. I believe he has now discovered that Mr. Armstrong's statement is correct—that neither ordered the retreat at Bladensburg—caused the navy yard to be burnt—the fort to be abandoned—not the bridges to be destroyed, &c. &c. with which the "village mob" have charged him.—There is another fact which is perhaps very important, and which has just come to light: Gen. Armstrong, seeing Winder's want of capacity, solicited the command some time before the day of battle—it was granted, but in three days afterwards, absolutely arrested from him by a written order from the President, and transferred to—

After Mr. Armstrong's resignation, Mr. Monroe was appointed Secretary of War and commander of the district—every munition of war was thrown into his hands he could require, and no obstacle whatever cast in his way. I give these facts for rumination. The Committee will develop others perhaps, more important—New Jersey is said to be republican in all its branches this election. The enemy has again returned to the Bay, with a view, it is said, of making another attack on Baltimore—Com. Chauncey is in Sackett's Harbor, expecting an attack from the enemy's fleet. The militia are pouring into the Harbor. I send you the General Order of Gen. Ross, the day prior to the battle of the 24th August.

FROM THE SAME.

October 23.

"Enclosed you have the report of the secretary of the treasury, which you will find an able one. The new tax bill is progressing rapidly in the house, and all parties unite in pushing it forward. The federalists, mortified at the necessity of harmonizing—take it out in abuse of the administration, which is very harmless, as it is always expected. Ravens know must bode, and Parrats will speak when they are taught. The only difference in the house who oppose the tax bill, is Mr. Cyrus King, and he is mad as a March-hare. N. Mexico has declared itself independent—the Royalists and Republicans uniting, in consequence of Ferdinand's rejection of the constitution formed by the Cortes. Congress have agreed to purchase Mr. Jefferson's Library.—An American privateer, called Midas, landed on the Bahama and burnt and plundered 27 houses—from one man they took 750 doubloons, and said they did it by way of retaliation for the destruction of the American capitol. A very good thing, you will acknowledge. Another privateer, Prince of Neufchâtel, has arrived at Boston with a very valuable cargo. On her home-ward cruise, she captured 18 prizes. She was attacked by 5 barges from the Endemion frigate, all of which were sunk or taken—and their crew, amounting to 120 men, nearly all killed or wounded—the action lasted 20 minutes. It was reported that the privateer Yankee had captured a large British transport, having on board 500 regular troops—but the report I believe to be unfounded. Another report is that Gen. Izard had taken fort George—but this has not been confirmed. The secretary of war, it is said, is to be made governor of Virginia. The secretary can't manage the very complicated concerns of the war department."

DEFERRED ARTICLES.

FROM THE DEMOCRATIC PRESS.

DESERTERS.

As some folks appear to be excessively squeamish on the subject of encouraging desertion from the ranks of an enemy (who has declared his determination not to observe, towards us, "the laws of war observed among civilized nations") we deem it proper to publish the following extract from the journal of the old congress, by which it will be seen that the best days of the republic afford a precedent for the measure recently proposed by Mr. Fisk, in the United States house of representatives.—If it be objected that the preamble to the resolution of 1776 alledges, in justification of its provisions, that the British government had endeavored to entice our troops to desert, &c. we answer, that they do the same thing now, daily and notoriously.—Are not rewards for bringing over their arms, accoutrements and horses offered to our troops on the northen frontier? Are not the militia invited to return to their homes, and desert the service and defence of their country? Has not the British regent issued his proclamation, commanding those whom he claims as his subjects, because they were born in his dominions; but we are our citizens, because naturalized bona fide in time of peace, according to a legislation and practice which is common to both countries, commanding them to quit our service and return to their native country?

Extract from the Journal of Congress, August 14th, 1776—Folwell's edition, vol. 2, page 292.

The committee appointed to devise a plan for encouraging the Hessians and other foreigners to quit the British service, brought in a report, which was taken into consideration: whereupon congress came to the following resolutions:

Whereas the parliament of Great Britain have thought fit, by a late act, not only to invite our troops to desert our service, but to direct a compulsion of our people, taken to sea, to serve against their country.

Resolved, therefore, That these states will receive all such foreigners, who shall leave the armies of his Britannic

Majesty in America, and shall choose to become members of any of these states;

and they shall be protected in the free exercise of their respective religion, and be invested with the rights, privileges

Sr. LOUIS, October 22.

Fort Johnson Evacuated and Burnt.

A few days ago the troops who were stationed at the new fort (Johnson at the foot of the rapids of Lemoine) arrived at Cape aux Grei having burnt the Blockhouses & otherwise destroyed the works. The officer who commanded there declares he was out of provisions: the officer commanding here, says he had provisions until the 20th inst. & an abundance on the river, bound up. How these proceedings will be represented at Washington we know not: or how they will be remedied, the future will determine.

Extract of a letter from Erie, October 21.

"News from General Brown's army stands thus: All our army have marched down, leaving our militia and some regiments in fort Erie. They are gone to Chippawa creek. The British have taken up their bridge, and fortified on the other side. Our men have cut a road six miles up and have thrown a bridge across the creek. Some skirmishing has taken place, and one picket fight. Thus far we have been completely successful. How the general battle may end, is uncertain; but our troops will unquestionably do their duty. Next week you will doubtless hear something important from this quarter.—Mer.

Boston, Oct 20.

A letter from a gentleman at Buffalo, dated Oct. 22, received by the express of to-day, says—"The army under Maj. Gen. IZARD is expected to return to fort Erie in a day or two, without having accomplished the object of the expedition. The season has already set in very cold. And as the army, for the sake of expedition, moved with but two tents to a company, almost all the men have to lay out in the snow and rain. The sick are constantly brought up to this place, and last evening General BROWN arrived at this place."

Washington City, Oct. 25.

LATEST FROM SACKETT'S HARBOR.

An officer belonging to the U. States ship Madison, arrived in town on Tuesday night. He left Sackett's Harbor on the 14th inst. and informs that Commodore Chauncey's fleet returned to the Harbor on the 13th, and were moored head and stern across the Harbor, in battle order; that Sir James's fleet, including the large ship, came out on the 11th and returned the next day; that the guns on board the Oneida were to be taken ashore, and a battery erected with them; that it was expected (as Sir James Yeo had now the complete command of the Lake) that the fleet would not now go but again this season, but would remain in their present situation to defend the place.

The following is a copy of the orders issued by Gen. Ross the day before the battle at Bladensburg.

D. A. O. August 23, 1814.

Major General Ross cannot but express the greatest dissatisfaction at the disorderly conduct of the Troops in persevering in the system of straggling and marauding about the country, the moment they take up their ground. There must be an extreme want of attention on the part of the officers, as otherwise the irregularity would be checked.

Major General Ross looks to the Colonels commanding brigades for exertions in putting a period to a conduct so disorderly in the soldier and disgraceful to the service.

YANKEE LIQUORS.

A NEW SONG.

COME all ye jolly Yankee Tars,
That plough the stormy water,
Let's bury in the circling can,
Our perils, wounds and slaughter.

Yankee doodle, doodle doo,
Come let us all be merry,
And fill our glasses to the brim,
With Porter and with Perry.

John Bull he is a swaggering dog,
As ever trod a deck, sir;
But gun to gun, and man to man,
We'll make him soon a wreck, sir.

Yankee doodle, doodle doo,
Away your beer and cherry;
We'll fill our glasses to the brim,
With Porter and with Perry.

Now John last year at vintage time,
He swore he would make merry,
And faith say he, I have a mind
To taste your Yankee Perry.

Yankee doodle, doodle doo,
Away with ale and cherry;
We'll fill our glasses to the brim,
With Porter and with Perry.

So John he took a hearty pull,
But found it was not sack, sir;
Before he'd drain'd the second can,
It laid him on his back, sir.

Yankee doodle, doodle doo,
Away with sack and cherry;
We'll fill our glasses to the brim,
With Porter and with Perry.

Miss Phoebe came the other day,
To taste the Yankee liquor,
Supported by a spruce gallant,
For fear of getting chpper.

Yankee doodle, doodle doo,
Away with milk and water,
We'll fill our glasses to the brim,
With Perry and with Porter.

Old Davy take the coward hag
And imp that did escort her;
Though she has got the empty cask,
Yet we have got the Porter.

Yankee doodle, doodle doo,
Away with milk and water;
We'll fill our glasses to the brim,
With Perry and with Porter.

Your Frenchmen, Dutchmen, Spaniards all,
Shall never rule the ocean;
At loading quick and shooting right,
They hav'n't got the notion.

Yankee doodle, doodle doo,
Away your gin and sherry;
We'll fill our glasses to the brim,
With Porter and with Perry.

Now here's a health to all who fight,
For "Sailor's Right" and glory;
Long may they live, and when they die,
Their deeds be told in story.

Yankee doodle, doodle doo,
Come let us all be merry;
And fill our glasses to the brim,
With Porter and with Perry.

PATENT LOOM,

LATELY INVENTED BY WALTER JONES. THE Subscriber has the sole right to the use of this invention, and offers Patent Rights for counties, or single Looms for sale, on what he conceives advantageous terms, to manufacturers or purchasers for domestic use. The price for using a single loom is twenty-five dollars, and for the exclusive privilege of a county, will measurably depend on the population. The difference between Jones's and the loom in common use is this—by the aid of some simple machinery, the shuttle is thrown across the warp, the web is taken up on the beam, and the gears raised and lowered, without the aid of tredles, by the single act of drawing up the batten with one hand, and this additional machinery is neither costly, complex, or liable to go out of repair. Some of the advantages of this loom are—any one can weave on it, and its operations being guided by machinery, and consequently performed with more certainty than by the hand, the operator proceeds with much more expedition. It is stated that those who are accustomed to both this and the common fly shuttle loom, can weave more than double the quantity on this in the same time. The degree of correctness with which this loom is here represented, may be ascertained by an examination of one now in operation in the house adjoining Mr. C. Coyle's, Main street, Lexington, Ky.

As the subscriber has the sole right to the use of this invention for the state of Kentucky, (Nelson and Washington counties excepted) he wishes to caution individuals against purchasing from any one else than himself, or those claiming under him, as so doing may be attended with unpleasant consequences.

The undersigned may generally be found at the office of the Kentucky Insurance Company, or at his residence near Lexington, who has for sale, an invoice of first, second and third quality Philadelphia made SADDLES.

JOHN L. MARTIN.

Lexington, September 23. 39

JANE'S LOOM.

This exquisite machine has been visited by numbers, and the more it is seen, the more it is admired. The proprietor for this state wishes to sell out his patent right in shares to a company—& we have little doubt, that if they will be content with a moderate price for the use of it (say $40) it will be found extremely to their own profit, as well as that of the public. With the aid of Carding and Spinning Machines, which are gradually getting into use, we shall manufacture our own stuffs so cheaply, as to supersede, in a considerable degree, the same qualities of European fabrics.

Mr. Richard Harris (and when we name him, we name a gentleman whose works in this city unquestionable place him among the first in the first class of our artists) speaks of this machine in the following terms:

"Not only is R. H. much pleased with the indulgence allowed him of examining a machine constructed upon such perfect mechanical principles, and which performs the act of weaving with so much dispatch, ease to its attendant, and correctness in web; but when he considers that it requires only one hand of the artist to produce the whole operation, without the motion of the foot, he finds no hesitation in saying, that it has greatly the preference over any loom he has ever seen."

"Convinced of its great public and private utility, R. H. is of opinion that it is highly deserving of patronage, and hopes that the knowledge and experience of its benefit will be speedily diffused through our country."

Dr. James Mease, of Philadelphia, says, in a letter to Mr. Jefferson, of the 27th ult. "I have the pleasure to send you a printed specification of the Patent of Jones, for his newly invented loom, which is now in operation in this city. I visited the manufactory established by the person who bought the right of this state, and of those to the South, and was much gratified. We may say with respect to the loom what the French Society of Agriculture said of your Plough: "America received the Loom from Europe, and returned it perfected."

Mr. Jefferson, of whose skill in the arts we cannot say too much, terms it "a loom of the most beautiful invention imaginable"—and says, "Nobody was more pleased than myself with its construction."—Richmond Enquirer.
